David Fleishman is uniquely qualified to defend clients in cases involving both criminal and civil legal issues. Having served as lead counsel in countless criminal and civil cases, David brings to every case a combination of expertise, commitment, and strategic creativity to achieve favorable results for his clients.

David focuses his civil litigation practice primarily in the areas of motor vehicle tort defense, insurance coverage disputes, and first-party insurance defense. He zealously represents both individuals and corporations at all stages of litigation, including settlement negotiations, mediations, arbitrations, motions hearings, and trials. David has substantial civil trial experience having tried numerous cases before judges and juries throughout many of the district and circuit courts of Maryland. His extensive litigation experience and particularized knowledge of the court system allows him to strategically analyze any case and implement a strategy to ensure the best possible outcome for his clients.

David also represents individuals charged with serious traffic, misdemeanor, and/or felony offenses in Maryland. Before joining Budow and Noble, P.C., David worked as a tenacious advocate with the Maryland Office of the Public Defender in Montgomery County, Maryland. He has represented hundreds of individuals on a variety of criminal charges, including DWI and DUI offenses, drug possession and distribution offenses, sex offenses, domestic violence related offenses, weapons offenses, theft offenses, burglary offenses, and assaults. David's significant criminal defense litigation experience allows him to consistently generate positive outcomes for clients at all stages of criminal proceedings, including bond reviews, suppression motions hearings, plea negotiations, district court appeals, bench trials, and jury trials.
